Grief is the feelings and emotions you experience when someone dies. It's normal Although sadness is the emotion most associated with grief, you might not always recognise it. The death of someone you love can make you feel isolated. Grief, I've learned, is just another name for Love; they are here, together, and we "No one ever told me that grief felt so like fear," C.S. Lewis once wrote. "Grief is no more necessary when we understand death than fear is. Love does always end in grief, maybe a small loss here and there about expectations not being met, What we have to do is understand that it's all a cycle.
