

Excerpt from Sermons and Discourses, Vol. 1 The Discourses contained in this Volume are a few of those preached by the Author in the course of his ministry. He publishes them, somewhat against his own judgment, in deference to the urgent request of some whose opinion is entitled to his regard. The reception accorded to a few of them, issued in pamphlet form, would seem to justify their advice. These Sermons were not written before their original delivery, but carefully prepared as to thought and matter; the moment of speaking was trusted to for the language and manner of expression. They were afterward reduced to writing, although without any intention of publication, but only as a means of preserving what had been the fruit of much reflection and some research. They were written, as far as memory served, as spoken. They are published as then written, with such verbal corrections as were necessary.
